

FRANCIS MALONEY MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

$6,000
ANNUAL SCHOLARSHIP
GRANTED BY THE CITY OF MERIDEN

PURPOSE

This scholarship is offered to perpetuate the memory of Meriden's beloved Senator Maloney in the belief that it will encourage young men and women of outstanding ability to emulate Senator Maloney's character. It is earnestly hoped that recipients of the scholarship will be inspired to give service to their city and their country in the chosen field of work in such measure as to bring honor to themselves and their community, as did Senator Maloney.

ELIGIBILITY

Applicants must possess outstanding character, scholarship, personality, and the quality for leadership. This is an academic scholarship where financial need may be taken into consideration.

REQUIREMENTS

Applicants must have been residents of Meriden four years standing previous to the awarding of this scholarship.

An applicant accepting this award may enroll in the degree granting college or technical school of his/her choice, and will signify his/her intention to pursue his/her course to completion as designated in his/her application.

The recipient of the scholarship must continue to do satisfactory work in college to receive the four yearly grants of $6,000.

PROCEDURE

Application must be filed before April 1st.

Application blanks and further information may be obtained at the Francis T. Maloney High School, Orville H. Platt High School, or Horace T. Wilcox Technical School and the City of Meriden website. www.meridenct.gov

The City of Meriden grants the Francis T. Maloney Scholarship to perpetuate the memory of the Senator from Connecticut who gave his life in the service of his community and his nation. He was an inspiration to all who knew him. Meriden honors herself in doing this honor to his memory. In generations of the future she believes this scholarship will foster among her coming citizens an appreciation of community responsibility as exemplified in the character of Senator Maloney.

Francis Maloney (born in Meriden in 1894 - died, 1945) was forced to become self-supporting at an early age. He assumed responsibility for partial support of others in his family. Consequently, his formal education ended before he could complete high school. His lack of normal schooling never ceased to be his greatest regret. Life and experience more than compensated his education, but it served to increase his respect for the advantage of high school and college training.

After a few years of varied employment, Francis Maloney became a reporter for the Meriden Record. In the course of his work, his interest in matters of public welfare steadily increased. During ensuing years in his own insurance business, he was more and more engrossed with public betterment. When the depression came, his city looked to him for leadership through the days when wholesale unemployment was the dread specter of society. For two terms as Mayor of Meriden, he steered the municipal course into safety with a minimum of suffering and a maximum economy.

It was natural that his quality of leadership should send him on to greater responsibility in public life. He went first to Congress as Representative from this District and then to the United States Senate where he was known as the "Senator's Senator". He served the people of Connecticut, and the United States as a whole, with increasing brilliance and wisdom during the ten years prior to his death.

Through his every word and act, he displayed his profound belief in the need for greater social justice, his burning hope for greater opportunity for more people. Therefore, his City of Meriden, in affectionate memory of her great citizen, offers this memorial scholarship to her young men and women. Meriden seeks, thereby to carry out, in part, one of his fondest dreams as a tribute to this man of good judgment, clear perception, and great good works.
